JUNE 2021

Preparedness to Flood Response

Let us be prepared on time to prevent a Humanitarian Disaster in Nepal

BACKGROUND

Each year, usually between June and September, the annual summer monsoon results into severe floods and sweeps across the southern plain, particularly, Province 1 and Province 2 of Nepal. If we lookback to 2017, we have the records that around 1.7 million people were affected, with 460,000 displaced from their homes, many with nowhere to go. Those most affected were poor, smallholder farmers.

Similarly, in 2019, the reported incidence of flood heavy rain and landslides affected 6,168 families directly. More than 5,100 houses were destroyed or partially damaged displacing people temporarily or rendering many homeless. The number of recorded landslide incidents counted to 397 across the country.

2021 has been already considered to be higher risk of floods and landslides due to the impact of Cyclone Yaas has already triggered light to heavy rainfall in many parts of Nepal well before the arrival of monsoon. The risk of flood and landslide in various parts of the country has already risen with recent changes in weather.

Through a Press Note, the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Authority (NDRRMA) has requested local communities and those involved in disaster management initiatives to minimise the risks and dangers of possible outcomes of changing weather by spreading the message and has further requested security agencies, government and non-government organisations related to disaster management to remain in high alert in all the disaster prone districts.

Package 1: Preparedness of Flood Response

In consideration to the request by NDRRMA to the concerned authorities for preparedness of flood response, NTT, in its own initiatives, has designed a shelter tent (see picture) to fit-in 5 people with a concept of one tent for one household for temporary accommodation of the displaced and homeless people . In this tent, the 6'X2.5' sized camp cots can be comfortably placed to accommodate the members of one household.

The entire package comprises of:
